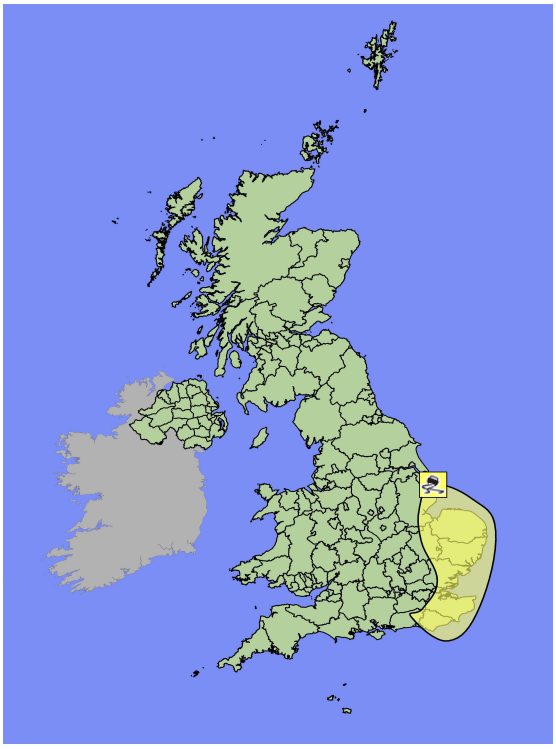
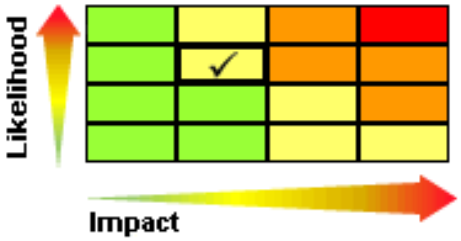
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
There will certainly be some icy conditions again during Saturday evening and overnight into Sunday, as snow which has partly melted in Saturday's sunshine refreezes very soon after dusk. There is uncertainty regarding the extent of light snow and freezing rain later in the night and during Sunday morning, with amounts generally small but still the possibility of tricky conditions for a time.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 02:00 on Sun, 12th Feb 2012 until 11:00 on Sun, 12th Feb 2012

Icy conditions are likely again on Saturday night, as temperatures fall rapidly. The situation may be made worse later in the night, as an area of light snow and freezing rain edges south across parts of this area.

The public is advised to take extra care when traveling overnight and for a time on Sunday morning, but with less cold weather steadily following from the north, conditions should ease before midday.
